HONEST AMEND.

"Manly Thing to Do," said Mr. Oliver S. Howes.

Mr. E. A. Tuttle: "An Open, Honest Stand."

McNelly's Axis Condemned by Fair-Minded Citizens.

Fane H. Brown (8): "A different attitude towards politics is characteristic of Massachusetts newspapers. We are glad that the Globe has made an express apology for the oversight and mistake so frequently made in the past. The improvement will, we hope, be permanent."

Boston Daily Globe (1872-1922); Oct 12, 1892; ProQuest Historical Newspapers: The Boston Globe

pg. 1
HONEST AMEND.

Continued from the First Page.

The subject of Master's note above is the constitution of a new government for the Southern States. The plan submitted by Master is not a new one, but is the same that has been advocated by many of the leading politicians of the South for many years past. The object of the plan is to establish a government that shall be free from the corruption and inefficiency that have been so prevalent in the governments of the Southern States. The plan is based upon the principle that the people should have a voice in the government of their own country, and that the government should be administered in a just and equitable manner. The plan is also designed to provide for the education of the people, and to give them an opportunity to participate in the government of their country.

The plan is expected to have a profound influence on the political life of the Southern States. It is expected that the plan will be accepted by the people of the South, and that it will be adopted by the government. The plan is expected to bring about a great change in the political life of the South, and to make the Southern States a great and powerful nation.

The plan is expected to have a beneficial effect upon the economy of the Southern States. It is expected that the plan will bring about a great increase in the production of crops, and will make the Southern States a great agricultural nation. The plan is expected to bring about a great increase in the production of cotton, and will make the Southern States a great cotton-producing nation. The plan is also expected to bring about a great increase in the production of tobacco, and will make the Southern States a great tobacco-producing nation.

The plan is expected to have a beneficial effect upon the social life of the Southern States. It is expected that the plan will bring about a great improvement in the educational system of the South, and will make the Southern States a great educational nation. The plan is also expected to bring about a great improvement in the health of the people, and will make the Southern States a great healthy nation.